

The economic reasoning is that shipping conditions, energy prices, and domestic policy conditions can influence food costs over time, while lagged inflation captures persistence in consumer prices.

Model Comparison Report